“ We are so very sad to hear of Char's sudden passing and our heart aches for Lee Ann. My husband and I knew Char over the years to be a quiet, gentle, and reserved person unless you spoke his language of computers and music. Mike and Char would have endless conversations about the computer world and their similarities in music interest. I remember when Char bought his mustang, he was so excited and so protective of his car. He was a kind soul and thought of others as well. He had a special bond with his mother, and was heart broken when she passed. Char and his dad (Charles) had a father and son bond who shared many conversations with my husband Mike while working at the house. He loved, respected and admired his sister (Lee Ann) as she looked up to him as her big brother. Our thoughts and prayers are with Lee Ann during this difficult time.

“ Just heard of Charlie's passing. He was a good co-worker. Kind've quiet but we got him talking about his love of his mustang and his computer game playing sometimes. He was a nice guy. He must've taken losing his father pretty hard. And then he was living all alone. Kind've surprised to hear of his passing. Pretty sad to hear at kind've fairly young age. Sorry about losing your brother.

“ Charlie was my only brother. He was also my best friend. We used to play together in the basement every night for hours and hours. As grownups we were separated when I moved away but reunited years later when I moved home. We really joined forces when my mother was diagnosed with cancer. We took care of her until she passed away a year later.

Then last year our father died. He was ill and Chip (my nickname for Charles) quit his job in Philadelphia to avoid getting and or bringing the COVID virus home. Our father was becoming ill so I am glad my brother made that sacrifice. We were both devastated when our father died but it hurt Chip even more. At that time my father and Chip were best friends. I don't think Chip ever got over our dad's death. Chip moved back to my parents house to take care of it.

My older brother Chip was my best friend. We spoke and texted almost every day. We had the same sense of humor and we laughed a lot together. I loved Chip very much. He was the only family left and now he's gone. I will miss him very much.
